Earth Day inspires recycling residents

Do the environment a favor and plan now to participate in Chesterfield's 19th annual Earth Day Festival Saturday, April 24.

It's the perfect time to recycle a variety of items, with the side benefit of clearing out lots of unwanted items from your house. Consider it a responsible part of spring cleaning.

Earth Day activities run from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Central Park, 16365

Lydia Hill Drive. It's the ideal place to recycle household electronics, prescription and over-the-counter drugs, used athletic shoes, worn-out hardcover and paperback books and phone books. You'll also be able to shred confidential documents (five-box limit).

Don't bring your cardboard. The Earth Day folks won't be accepting it, though you can recycle cardboard in your weekly pickup.

The festival is an ideal place

City honors volunteer energy advisor

Citizen Rosenberg, Chesterfield salutes you. At the Jan. 22 City Council meeting, Mayor John Nations presented Harvey Rosenberg with a proclamation recognizing his volunteer efforts as a special advisor to the mayor regarding renewable energy and energy alternatives.

Rosenberg, a Chesterfield resident, has worked with staff from the City of Chesterfield to develop a proposal to incorporate solar thermal energy into the water and heating system at City Hall. Such a system would significantly reduce the City's consumption of natural gas and associated energy costs.

Harvey Rosenberg is honored by Mayor John Nations at a meeting of the City Council.

Mayor's Letter

Moving transit forward

You have become accustomed over the years to reading in this space about the many issues, challenges, and opportunities facing the City of Chesterfield. The great majority of the time I have written about issues which are within the control of your City government or the voters of Chesterfield. Other times, I have shared with you matters of regional significance which have (or may have) a particular effect in Chesterfield; such is the case now.

In the past few weeks, I received so many questions about public transportation in Chesterfield and why this vital service is absorbing so much of my time and engrossing so much of my energies, that I am devoting this space to address these questions. Many people have rightly asked why their mayor is leading a funding campaign for the Metro Transit Agency and the significance of the issue which will be before all of the voters in St. Louis County on April 6.

To begin, I should point out that public transportation has received much of my attention over the years because it is an essential component of our economic strength and our ability to attract jobs to Chesterfield and the region in the future. In March 2009, the issue gained wide attention when Metro was forced to cut its service by about one-third throughout the region and lay off about 260 employees due to a lack of funding. At that time, I was able to negotiate, with the strong support of the City Council, a separate arrangement with Metro to continue bus service to Chesterfield. I took this drastic action because many Chesterfield residents use public transportation and many of our businesses rely on it.

Particularly dependent on public transportation are our healthcare providers. The plain fact is that many of the hospitals and nursing homes which care for our sick, elderly and disabled rely on public transportation to access the workforce. Many of these workers spend hours each day to get to jobs so that they are not relegated to the unemployment rolls. It is also a vital service for our service industries, colleges and universities, which is why the chancellors and presidents of so many of our educational institutions are supporting Metro in its efforts this year.

A basic question is: why does Metro need more money? Metro was formed decades ago but was/is not empowered with any taxing authority of its own and relies on the voters in the various jurisdictions it serves for financial support. While it is popular for people to blame the current funding situation on various issues related to the expansion of the MetroLink light rail line over the past few years, the fact is that funding has been an issue from the time it was founded. To compound the problem, Missouri state government provides less than 1% of the funds needed for public transportation – compared to a nation-wide average of 23%.

Another question is: what actions has Metro taken to recover from the consequences of the cross-county MetroLink extension? In 2008, Robert J. “Bob” Baer (the former CEO of UniGroup who transformed United Van Lines into the country’s largest mover and whose headquarters is located in Fenton) took over as president of Metro and brought his dynamic leadership to Metro’s management. Under Bob’s leadership, Metro has one of the most active and engaged Board of Directors in the region and has transformed Metro into what is now widely recognized as one the best managed transit agencies in the country and a leader in reliability and on-time performance. Recently, Metro’s Fleet Maintenance program was rated the best in the United States.

On April 6, the voters will have the opportunity to vote on what is known as Proposition A, which is a proposed one-half percent sales tax for public transportation in St. Louis County. If passed, Metro will restore the service cuts of last March as well as proceed with plans to fully serve the region through Metro Bus, MetroLink, and the Call-A-Ride service for the elderly and disabled. If Proposition A does not pass, Metro has estimated that public transportation services will be reduced by about 50% from its current level and will lay off approximately 600 employees, which would be another catastrophic job loss for the region.

I bring this to your attention because I have had so many of you asking me about these issues and because I believe it is vital that you have the information necessary to understand the impact of the April 6 vote on Proposition A. I encourage you to take a strong interest in the critically important issue of public transportation in our community.

John Nations, Mayor

Count on being counted

The U.S. Census is being conducted this year. That’s a count of everyone residing in the United States. The 10-question, one-page questionnaire will be sent to households by U.S. mail this month. Census workers will visit households that do not return the questionnaire to ensure a complete count.

It is very important that all residents be counted, as this helps guide local decision makers about where to build new roads, medical facilities, child-care facilities, senior citizen facilities, schools, business and more. Additionally, each year the federal government allocates funds to states and communities based, in part, on census data.

And more importantly for Chesterfield, the population figure is used to determine our share of the St. Louis County sales tax allocation from the sales tax pool. Since we are a pool city, Chesterfield does not keep all of its sales tax, but instead puts sales tax collected into a larger pot of money that is then distributed to pool cities based on population.

Going green: Council OK's solar thermal energy system for City Hall

After extensive review by city staff and the Mayor's special assistant for Renewable Energy and Energy Alternatives, a recommendation was approved at the Jan. 22 City Council meeting for the installation of a solar thermal energy system to reduce the consumption of natural gas and shift a portion of energy dependency to renewable fuels.

Arctic Solar Corporation, a Chesterfield-based business, will install the system this summer. A series of solar collector mechanisms and solar tubes will be placed on the roof of City Hall. The solar energy will heat water in the existing heating and cooling system to 210 degrees. That water is then mixed with conventionally heated water to achieve the desired temperature.

This process will also significantly reduce the use of water heaters operated for everyday consumption. The need for existing boilers will be significantly reduced, which lowers the consumption of natural gas. The total cost for the project is $350,000. Depending on a variety of factors, it is estimated that the cost-savings to be realized annually could be $30,000-$50,000.

PUBLIC WORKS

City's saws seek to keep trees in rightful places

Tree trimming is an ongoing activity as the City's street tree population matures.

The Street Maintenance Division of the Department of Planning & Public Works systematically trims trees along City streets to provide adequate clearance for vehicles and pedestrians. Trimming is also necessary to maintain the health of the trees themselves. Please note that the City's responsibility is limited to those trees located within a public right of way. Trees located on private property are the responsibility of the property owner.

Trees are trimmed on a five-year cycle and are also trimmed ahead of scheduled street reconstruction projects, and in response to storm damage. The trees are cut back to provide 12 feet of clearance over streets, and 10 feet of clearance over sidewalks.

Prior to initiating tree trimming operations in an area, the Street Maintenance Division distributes notices to all adjacent property owners advising them of the pending activity. Residents who want to trim the street trees in front of their homes themselves are asked to contact the Street Maintenance Division at 636.537.4000. It is important to note that all street trees must be trimmed to the City's specifications.

City street trees policy explained

The City's popular Residential Street Tree Program was created in 2008 and has resulted in the planting of approximately 150 trees within City right of ways along public residential streets.

One common misconception about the program is that the City will remove any existing trees in the right of way upon receipt of an application for new trees. However, the City only removes trees that are dead, dying, diseased or hazardous, as determined by qualified City staff after an inspection.

In order to determine if your existing trees qualify for removal, you must contact the city and request an inspection before sending in an application for new trees. To do this, call 636.537.4000. City staff will perform an inspection and then notify the homeowner of the decision. If the trees are to be removed, an application should be sent in after removal has taken place.

For more information and application materials please visit our website at www.chesterfield.mo.us/residential-street-tree.html. The application is also available at City Hall.

PUBLIC WORKS

Chesterfield zoning regulations are under review to stay in tune with development

Most people probably don't appreciate the positive effect of zoning in their community.

Zoning shapes the look and feel of the area. It dictates how close homes are to each other, how big the lots can be, what sort of common-area spaces are provided, and even the amount of grass and trees to be planted or that must remain. For businesses, it dictates things such as how many parking spaces are required, how tall and big buildings can be, what type of business can go into a certain building, and even hours of operation.

To ensure that the City's regulations are achieving desired development patterns, the Planning and Public Works Department is in the process of reviewing and modifying various sections of the Zoning Ordinance.

Already updated are items such as regulations on tree preservation and landscaping, which now seek to encourage native species, increase the diversity in site landscaping, and supplement the aesthetic value of development while preserving public safety.

Three new zoning districts were added, and revisions were made to the commercial and industrial zoning language to reduce inconsistencies and promote innovative, well designed developments that contribute to the long-term viability of the City of Chesterfield.

To allow for more environmentally sensitive residential design and ensure that sustainable development is encouraged, residential zoning ordinances are being revised so that density is managed in such a way as not to create a burden on streets and utilities.

Other updates include a city-wide parking study for various commercial developments with multiple tenants. This parking study was performed to gather data in conjunction with proposed revisions to the City's off-street parking regulations. The goal of these updates is to ensure that an appropriate amount of parking is provided at each location while not requiring an overabundance of parking, which reduces greenspace, creates seas of pavement and has a negative environmental impact.

City park is planned for property at Baxter and Old Baxter

The City of Chesterfield recently acquired the land known as the "Eberwein Property" with the intention of developing it as a city park.

Located at the corner of Baxter and Old Baxter roads, this 18-acre property is one of the few large tracts of land remaining in the city. To assist with the creation of a master plan for this park site, a citizen's committee is working with staff to generate concepts for use of the park as well as its general layout. The committee will continue to meet over the next several weeks, and the information derived will be presented to the City Council.

Rx drug take back booth will be part of Earth Day

CAPY is going into the drug business. Temporarily.

On Saturday, April 24, the Chesterfield Alliance for Positive Youth will sponsor a Prescription Drug Take Back Event at Chesterfield's annual Earth Day Festival in Central Park.

Prescription and over-the-counter drugs are being used increasingly by young people at parties or for experimentation. Even over-the-counter drugs can have unexpected and adverse health effects.

To lessen the improper use or abuse of these drugs, the CAPY is working with the Chesterfield Police Department to provide a safe and environmentally responsible way to dispose of unused or expired medications. Gather unneeded prescription and non-prescription drugs and bring them to the "Take Back" booth between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. at Earth Day (see story on page one).

CAPY held its first Information Forum Oct. 22 at City Hall. The workshop was conducted by Dr. Tim Jordan, national speaker and facilitator of workshops for parents, teachers, couples and families.

CAPY meets at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall on the second Tuesday of the month. Visitors are welcome to attend and learn more about CAPY.

St. Louis Civic Orchestra features classically trained musicians whose concerts are reaching a growing number of music lovers.

Civic Orchestra set for 2010 season; Paul Hubbert is new concertmaster

Though only in its second season under the banner of the St. Louis Civic Orchestra (SLCO), this talented group traces its beginnings to 1949 when it was known as the Kirkwood Symphony, consisting of a string trio.

Today, the SLCO is made up of 65 classically trained musicians who share their passion for music in Chesterfield by giving concerts at the Purser Center on the campus of Logan College of Chiropractic. From traditional symphony pieces to intense scores full of fervor and complexity, the SLCO offers the opportunity for all ages to experience world-class music.

In his overview of upcoming performances, Artistic Director Edward Dolbashian – a nine-year veteran of the SLCO – said concertgoers can expect goosebumps.

"Attendance is increasing, and we are building quite a large group of high-caliber musicians who share a common goal of creating great works of art through sound," he said. "They do it for the sheer love, and you see that enthusiasm and energy come through at every performance."

Paul Huppert is the orchestra's new concertmaster. He was scheduled to make his debut last month.

The April 10 performance will highlight winners from The Florence Frager Young Artist Competition. On May 22, the SLCO will be performing a pops concert. Concert details are posted on the orchestra's website as they become available.

Theater-cabaret company is setting up shop in Chesterfield Mall; camps offered

Dramatic License Productions (DLP), a new West County professional theater and cabaret company, has converted a 4,295-sq.-ft. former retail space at Chesterfield Mall into the Dramatic License Theater.

The new space seats 95 and is directly across the mall corridor from Houlihan's. It will feature professional theater and cabaret-style musical productions throughout the year.

Two Broads and a Mimbo – An Evening of Comedy and Cabaret runs May 7-8.

From Aug. 5-21, DLP presents That Champion Season by Jason

Miller. It's the story of four former high-school basketball champions, now adults, who reunite with their coach for what may be their last celebration of their victory.

Beginning this month, DLP also will provide week-long drama camps entitled "Lights Up! on Kids & Teens." Designed to enhance self-esteem and presentational skills, the camps offer children ages 8-15 hands-on experience in all aspects of theater arts.
